NERVE WEAKENS.

Holmes Bowed and Broken, Sobs as a Child.

THE END IS ALREADY IN SIGHT.

Miss Georgiana Yoke, Whom the Prisoner Persists In Calling His Wife, Relates a Story That Will Tighten the Noose Around His Neck—Attorneys For Defense Will Call No Witnesses.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—For about 30 [illegible] yesterday the nerve at which [illegible] marvelled forsook Holmes. [illegible] and broken he sank his head [illegible] and sobbed like a child. [illegible] the woman he persists in [illegible] wife and upon whom he had [illegible] highest hope, sat two yards [illegible] a story that slowly but [illegible] tightened the noose on his neck. [illegible] and 40 minutes she whispered to the court crier the words that [illegible] Pietzel had come to the Eleventh street house, where they were stopping the night before the murder, and [illegible] Holmes had been away for five [illegible] the next day, coming back [illegible] and excited, and carrying her [illegible] off to Indianapolis. It was [illegible] after this that the corpse was [illegible] the Callowhill house. At the [illegible] of her examination in chief, Holmes asked to conduct the cross-examination himself, and standing in a [illegible] of the dock, nervously moving his hands, he put a few questions. Then he said he would reserve the right [illegible] as a witness for the defense. Throughout her testimony Miss Georgiana Yoke (for so she calls herself) never once bestowed a passing glance upon the man she once loved. Miss Yoke is a tall, slender blonde of [illegible] type, and demeaned herself [illegible] a woman of refinement and intelligence. She was tastefully dressed in [illegible].

The case progressed so swiftly that [illegible] witnesses remain to be heard [illegible] the closing of the commonwealth's case. Then the defense will [illegible], and in spite of Holmes' statement that he would himself testify and also [illegible] Miss Yoke, his counsel privately [illegible] that the defense would offer no [illegible], but submit the case on argument alone. And they expressed supreme confidence in his acquittal.

Their first victory was gained last night. The defense strenuously objected to the introduction of any further evidence touching the alleged murder of the children. The jurymen were temporarily taken to their room and elaborate arguments followed, at the end of which Judge Arnold sustained the contention.

SUFFRAGE QUESTION.

Senator Irby Vigorously Attacks Report of Committee.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 1.—The great fight between Senator Irby and Senator Tillman on the suffrage question was opened by a speech from Senator Irby attacking the report of the committee. He said he would stultify himself and the cause of the people of South Carolina if he would vote for any discrimination against poor and illiterate men. He was not an ingrate who would accept the highest office in South Carolina from the poor and illiterate white men and then trample them beneath his feet, this reference being plainly aimed at Tillman. Irby said he would vote with the negroes against the Tillman [illegible] as long as it had an educational and property qualification. He denounced the plan as a political iniquity and declared that he never would betray those who gave him office. While denouncing the Tillman plan he offered [illegible].

EMPEROR WILLIAM ORATES.

Replies to a Toast In His Honor at an Anniversary Banquet.

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—Emperor William attended the celebration of the Rifle battalion of the guards at the anniversary of the recapture of Le Bourget, Oct. 30, 1870. At the banquet the emperor made a speech in reply to a toast in his honor, saying:

"I trust that the pillars of the army—[illegible] obedience and bravery—will continue, and may the great days of Aug. 16 and September remain [illegible] upon our minds in ineffaceable letters. We will keep and improve what our forefathers have won. May the Rifle battalion in peace or war add to the laurels of its ancient glory."

Cases of Buck Gang Appealed.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 1.—Lucky Davis, Maoma July, Sam Sampson, Lewis Davis and Rufus Buck, members of the notorious Buck gang, sentenced [illegible] yesterday for numerous murders and assaults on women in the [illegible], have appealed their cases to the United States supreme court. [illegible] a respite until their appeals are decided upon.

Body of Mrs. Eustis Coming Home.

[illegible], Nov. 1.—The remains of Mrs. J. B. Eustis, wife of the ambassador to France, who died on Saturday [illegible] Rosath, accompanied by her [illegible], embarked yesterday on board the White Star line steamship Majestic [illegible] to New York. The [illegible] interred in the family plot [illegible] Hill cemetery at Louisville.

What About the Fish?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—President [illegible], Commissioner of Internal Revenue Miller, who spent yesterday [illegible], near Charlestown, W. Va., fishing, returned to [illegible] last night on a special [illegible] at 8:30.

Arrested For Murder.

[illegible], N. Y., Nov. 1.—Charles [illegible] was arrested yesterday charged with the murder of Mrs. Wins[illegible] and her daughter, Mrs. [illegible] Davis, in December last.

GIRLS WON THEIR BEAU NIGHT.

Had a Champion In One of the Department Houses.

NEW CUMBERLAND, W. Va., Nov. 1.—The girls at the Chelsea pottery have won their fight for one "beau" night in the week. During the busy season they are compelled to work until 9 o'clock each night. To this they made no objections, provided they were granted one night in the week to entertain gentlemen friends.

An order was issued by the foreman that the girls in the decorating department work Wednesday evenings hereafter. The indignant girls found a champion in the person of one of the bosses in their department, who has a girl himself, and he did not want to be deprived of the pleasure of her company. So he notified the foreman that neither he or the girls would work on any Wednesday evening, and the kick was so forcible that the order was withdrawn and the girls will be given the privilege of seeing their gentlemen friends as usual.

DEFIED THE BISHOP.

Fathers Fitzgerald and Murphy Expelled From the Diocese.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 1.—The long drawn out fight between Bishop Bonacum and his priests, which has resulted in that prelate being in the police court for criminal libel and the removal of many priests, was renewed yesterday when a diocesan court convicted Fathers Fitzgerald and Murphy and expelled them from the diocese for defying the bishop.

The bishop presided, and the convicted men assert they are victims of a packed jury. The defendants were notified to appear for trial by a Lincoln detective, but refused to accept an irregular service and did not put in an appearance when the trial was called. Consequently they were found guilty of contumacy.

IN THE NICK OF TIME.

Burglars Blow a Safe While the Earthquake Is On.

GOLDEN, Ills., Nov. 1.—Just at the moment when the earth was rumbling and affrighted citizens of this place were endeavoring to maintain their positions in beds swayed by earthquake, enterprising burglars applied the match to a fuse and blew a safe in a general store, thus profiting by the general noise and confusion. Several persons heard the muffled sound of the explosion but attributed it to the earthquake.

THE DOCTOR PEACHED.

And Secret Service Officials Capture a Lot of Material.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Dr. Orlando E. Bradford, the convicted counterfeiter, has "squealed" on the Brockway gang, and as a result Chief Hazen of the secret service, who came from Washington to hear the wily doctor sentenced, is now in possession of nine plates for counterfeiting bills and banknotes, partially finished bills for $1,000,000 of spurious money, and very valuable information regarding the workings of the notorious Brockway gang.

THE WALLER CASE.

Mrs. Waller Makes a Statement and Files Affidavits.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Waller, accompanied by her counsel, Mr. Langston, called at the state department by appointment and had a long interview with Assistant Secretary Uhl, representing the case of her husband, ex-Consul Waller, during the course of which she gave all the facts connected with his arrest, and supplemented her statements by affidavits.

Fears He Will Be Lynched.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 1.—Virgil Staley, who killed his brother-in-law, Lafayette Adkins, in Wayne county, has sent word to the officers that he will surrender if given protection, as he fears that an effort may be made to lynch him. He will be taken to a jail in another county if captured.

A Serious Matter.

BELLEFONT, Pa., Nov. 1.—Two students have been expelled from the state college and 14 indefinitely suspended for hazing, and, in addition, most of them, maybe all of them, may get into the criminal courts here before the affair is entirely at an end.

Molten Metal Explodes.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 1.—An explosion of molten metal at the Carnegie blast furnaces at Braddock fatally burned Joseph Schwagos and Mike Goski and slightly injured a number of other workmen. The cause of the explosion is not known.

Chinese Troops Defeated by Rebels.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 1.—News has been received that the Mohammedan insurgents have captured Lan Tchou Fu, [illegible] of the province of Kan Su on the Yellow river, and that they are defeating the Chinese troops in every direction.

Snow In Nebraska.

WILSON'S BLUFFS, Neb., Nov. 1.—The [illegible] of the Burlington and Missouri [illegible] and St. Francis branch, [illegible] covered with snow from two to four inches. [illegible] was so heavy that [illegible] train was stuck in a cut.

A Very Live Corpse.

FRIEDRICHSRUH, Nov. 1.—There is absolutely no foundation for the sensational rumor that Prince Bismarck is dead. On the contrary the prince has enjoyed better health recently than he has for some time.

Bourgeois Accepts.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—M. Bourgeois informed President Faure that he has accepted the task of forming a new cabinet.

CHICAGO HOLD-UP.

Attempt to Rob Passengers on a Streetcar

CREATES INTENSE EXCITEMENT.

Passengers Attacked by the Highwaymen Set Up a Cry of "Robbers"—Conductor Grapples With One of the Gang, Who Escapes. Pursuit Relinquished After an Exciting Chase. No Trace Found.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—A daring attempt to rob the passengers of a Western avenue electric car in front of the motor power house on Washington boulevard late last night was frustrated by a wholesale use of revolvers. No booty was secured by the robbers, but intense excitement was created by the pursuit. The robbers boarded the car near the Lake street crossing. At the same moment the trolley was jerked off.

Conductor Butterworth ran to the rear platform. He was met by a young man in a slouch hat who grappled with him. Just at that moment some passengers, attacked by one of the two robbers in the car set up a cry of "robbers." Butterworth's antagonist made a spring over the rear dashboard. After an exciting pursuit of the robber the party returned to the car, but found only a few of the passengers huddled in the roadway. No trace of the two men who had attempted the job inside the car could be had, as they had quietly disappeared.

PUZZLE FOR SCIENTISTS.

With No Rain Dry Streams In Indiana Suddenly Fill and Overflow.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 1.—An interesting point for scientists to consider in regard to the earthquake which was felt in this city about 5:30 yesterday morning is the fact that a number of the smaller Indiana streams having their source in the southern border of the gas belt have suddenly filled with water. No rains have occurred in this state for months to swell the streams, and in the case of Honey creek, in the eastern part of Bartholomew county, it had gone dry several weeks ago, the water standing only in pools here and there. This week it is filled to the brim and in some places has overflowed and washed away fences on adjoining farms. Sugar creek, which runs near Edinburg, Johnson county, was nearly dry, but now it is reported to be nearly filled. Smaller streams rising in the Hancock county gas territory have shown similar phenomena.

No one can explain from whence the water comes, and it is offered that the sinking of the earth in the gas belt has afforded new outlets for underground water courses, thus feeding the streams. In the case of Honey creek the records show that previous to the Charleston earthquake, Aug. 1, 1886, the stream acted as it has now. The phenomena was repeated previous to the earthquake on Sept. 26, 1876, both of these quakes having been strongly felt in Indiana.

TERMS REJECTED.

King of Ashanti Prefers War to Acceptance of British Ultimatum.

ACCRA GOLD COAST COLONY, British West Africa, Nov. 1.—Captain Donald Stewart, the special British commissioner, was sent to Coomassi, the capital of Ashanti, recently, escorted by 105 hussars under Captains Cramer and Irvine, to present the King of Ashanti with the ultimatum of Great Britain, has returned here bringing the first authentic news of the result of his mission. The King of Ashanti has rejected the British ultimatum, saying that he prefers war to accepting the terms of the British, and adds that he is fully prepared for it.

The terms of the British ultimatum were that the king should have a British commissioner in his country and that he should place Ashanti under the protection of Great Britain. He was given until yesterday in which to reply.

New French Ministry.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The new ministry, so far as formed, is as follows: M. Bourgeois, minister of the interior and president of the council of ministers; M. Ricard, minister of justice and worship; M. Cavaignac, minister of war; M. Lockroy, minister of marine; M. Berthelot, minister of education; M. Doumer, minister of finance; M. Guyot d'Essaigne, minister of public works; M. Mesureur, minister of commerce; M. Combes, minister of the colonies.

Foreign Stockholders Will Have a Say.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—It is said that Mr. Fleming, chairman of the English committee of stockholders, and Mr. Duden, chairman of the Dutch stockholders' committee, are on their way to this country to assist in breaking the deadlock in the reorganization committee of the Atchison.

Charged With Promoting Fraud.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—C. W. Pryor was arrested on a bench warrant from the federal district court and held for trial in the sum of $1,500. Pryor was indicted by the grand jury last week on a charge of using the mails for the furtherance of a fraudulent scheme.

General Schofield's Pay Cut.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Paymaster General Stanton of the army has decided that Lieutenant General Schofield, retired, is not entitled to the full pay of an active rank, but to only three-fourths of that amount, the regular rate of pay of all retired officers.

Murder at Braddock.

BRADDOCK, Pa., Nov. 1.—A Polish wedding at Braddock ended in a murder. A free-for-all fight started and one of the guests was stabbed through the heart. He died almost instantly. Andy R[illegible], the man who did the cutting, managed to escape.

EX-PRESIDENT HARRISON

Introduces General Gordon to an Indianapolis Audience.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 1.—General John B. Gordon delivered his lecture here upon "The Days of the Confederacy." The audience contained Commander-in-Chief Walker of the Grand Army, James Whitcomb Riley, and a large number of the prominent veterans of the city and state. Ex-President Harrison occupied the stage during the entire evening and applauded freely. The names of Grant, Sheridan, Meade, Hancock, Sherman, Lee and Jackson were cheered at times for three minutes, and great enthusiasm marked the spirit of the evening.

Ex-President Harrison was cheered when he arose to introduce General Gordon and said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I do not believe that a lecture of Bismarck on the last days of the Franco-Prussian war would be listened to in Paris, but we shall listen tonight, not only without prejudice, but with the greatest pleasure, to a lecture from that distinguished soldier and statesman, General Gordon of Georgia. The two conditions are widely different. We have not lost Alsace and Lorraine. We have not lost any territory. We are tonight again a union of all the states, under one flag, loved by all its people. [Applause.] We are cherishing no revenges; we are tonight asking only this question of any man—does he love the constitution and the flag? [Applause.] And this question our distinguished friend has already nobly answered. [Applause.] There was some good accruing from that long and bloody strife. We learned to have a better appreciation of each other. Before the war the south undervalued the north and the north undervalued the south. In that struggle we learned to value each other for what we are worth and to find in each other that courage, that endurance, that devotion to a cause which is characteristic of Americans and made us one in spite of our strife. [Applause.] And not that only—for I shall not go through the catalogue—it has given us a magnificent preparation for the next war. [Applause.]

There was a great deal of discussion during the war and there has been a great deal of military criticism since as to the relative advantage possessed by the Confederate and the Union armies. We had ample war material and larger population. They had interior lines. All of these questions have been discussed. Perhaps we did not have a fair test of which was the better man; but if this country should ever again assemble a great army and Georgia should charge with Indiana, then we would know, and woe to those that must meet that resistless charge.

It is a subject of profound gratification and rejoicing to every true American that the asperities of the ante war discussion and of the war itself are being wiped out and that we are today one in our love for this flag, one in our adherence to the constitution of the United States, and that we present to every foreigner [illegible] that threatens us a united, solid, courageous people. [Applause.] Without detaining you further let me present to you General Gordon.

BOMB EXPLOSION.

Monastery Damaged and Several Monks Die of Fright.

MADRID, Nov. 1.—A bomb which exploded in the monastery of Corjuela, in the province of Biscay, resulted in great damage. Several of the monks have died of fright caused by the explosion. The authors of the outrage are unknown.

At Chelva, in the province of Valance, a mob stoned a rosary procession and the crown of the image of the virgin, carried in the procession, was broken. Great excitement was caused by the disorder. Several persons were wounded.

WILL BE NO FIGHT

This Week Between Corbett and Fitzsimmons.

MARTIN JULIAN MAKES A FLUKE

And Sorely Disappoints a Crowd of Lanky Bob's Admirers. Corbett Fails to Put In an Appearance at the Ringside. Maher on Hand to Issue a Challenge—May Be Pulled Off Next Week.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 1.—"I am perfectly willing that this case be continued until tomorrow," said Martin Julian in Judge Joseph W. Martin's court yesterday afternoon. Had a bomb been exploded in temple of justice it would have created scarcely less sensation among the throng of interested spectators than did these words.

"Oh what a fluke!" "He don't want to go to Hot Springs." "Well, what do you think of that." These are fair samples of the expressions of utter disgust which flew from mouth to mouth as the disappointed crowd filed out of the courtroom close upon the heels of Martin Julian and Robert Fitzsimmons as they made their way back to their suite of rooms in the Capitol hotel in custody of two deputy sheriffs of Pulaski county.

Corbett Not In the Ring.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 1.—Corbett was scheduled to appear in the ring at Whittington park at high noon yesterday, throw off his cap and sweater and announce to such people as were present that he was the champion of the world, and that as Fitzsimmons was not there he was ready, willing and anxious to defend his title against all comers, but he did not materialize.

There was a story to the effect that Maher intended to listen until Corbett had finished his defiance, and then he was to step forward and offer himself as an opponent for the moment or for any future time. Another story was that Maher was to step forward, and as Corbett finished his speech "smash him in the eye."

No Fight Until Next Week.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 1.—The big fight is put over until next week, and there is no chance of Corbett and Fitzsimmons meeting in the ring before Tuesday at the very earliest. Chances are that everybody arriving here early next Wednesday morning will see the fight if it comes off. There will, however, be a fight on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Maher and O'Donnell will meet with 5-ounce gloves in Whittington park two miles from the center of the town. This match is definitely settled unless the state interferes in a very forcible manner, and it will be fought out according to program. Smith and Ryan will probably be given a chance on Tuesday.

The Committee Hold a Session.

The fight committee came to the conclusion yesterday afternoon to have the Maher-O'Donnell fight on the receipt of an order from Little Rock that it would be impossible to get Fitzsimmons out of his legal entanglement and have him in Hot Springs for a fight this week. It was then determined to pull off one of the minor contests, and the Ryan-Smith contest was taken up.

Parson Davies, Joe Vendig and the Smith party held a conference, but nothing came of it beyond an agreement that both men should weigh in at 8 o'clock this morning to enable them to claim the forfeit money from the club.

Grave Doubts Entertained.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 1.—There are grave doubts as to whether the Ryan-Smith fight will come off at all under the auspices of the Florida Athletic club. The club managers have asked that the men whose agreements call for a fight today defer their meeting. This the fighters are unwilling to do, and both will demand their forfeit money, $500 each. The local fight committee will probably take up the matter if the club drops it.

MAN VS. CATAMOUNT.

A Novel Prize Fight Scheduled to Take Place In Kentucky.

VANCEBURG, Ky., Nov. 1.—Captain Jack Shumate, superintendent of the animal department of a circus, arrived in the city yesterday, visiting his brother, D. B. Shumate, Democratic candidate for representative.

It will be remembered that he, John Cox and Dr. Connor last winter attracted national attention by demonstrating that a man could whip a wildcat. They have arranged now for a fight with a man and a catamount, as old hunters here claim that the latter is more vicious than a wildcat. Shumate says he will put money on the man. The catamount is on hand. The fight will take place within two weeks.

The Drought Broken.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Professor Moore, chief of the weather bureau, said yesterday that rain was falling throughout the drouth region from New Mexico to New England, and he gave the welcome information that the drought was broken. He expects the present storm to be followed by others at three day intervals.

Resist Arrest and Fatally Shoot Sheriff Smith.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 1.—Information has just reached this city of an attack by a mob of moonshiners upon Sheriff Been and United States Deputy marshals at Celina in the upper Cumberland country, led by Sam Smith, who was to be tried before United States Commissioner Hall. Smith and the mob of about 20 armed men resisted arrest, and Smith shot the sheriff, fatally wounding him. He and most of his mob then escaped into Kentucky.

THE EARTH TREMBLED.

The Central States Severely Shaken by an Earthquake.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Reports from the central states are to the effect that a violent earthquake shock was felt there about 5 o'clock Thursday morning, much damage being done to buildings in many places. Distinct undulations lasted from 30 to 45 seconds and the tremor lasted from 5 to 5:15 a. m.

At Charlestown, Mo., after the first shock, the earth's surface continued to vibrate for fully 20 minutes. Hundreds of chimneys were toppled down and plate glass in several store fronts broken to bits. The brick Methodist church was badly shattered and the plastering knocked from a hundred or more interiors.

Hotel Building Cracked.

WASHINGTON, Ind., Nov. 1.—Considerable damage was done to property. The Globe hotel, a brick building, was cracked from the roof to the ground. Mrs. Harry Bray was thrown from her bed, and chimneys in all parts of the city were shaken down.

COULDN'T GET IN

The Rosenfeld Liquor House Not Open to the Constable.

The doors of the Rosenfeld liquor store are closed and have been since Thursday afternoon. The store was operated here by Julius and Isadore Rosenfeld, and has been in existence for a couple of years, they having come here from Delaware. It has done more or less business, but of late from all appearances bills contracted that were not met. An execution was taken a week ago by a Dayton firm, but it was not served until Thursday and not then, for when Constable Huggins appeared with the papers there was no one in the store.

Julius had left for Chicago a day or two before and Isadore had gone to dinner and not returned. A search was made all over the city for the latter gentleman, but he could not be found. Then Constable Huggins secured a number of keys, but they were not made for the door and it could not be opened.

This morning another attempt was made to open the door, but in the meantime T. P. Wallace, of the Marion Deposit Bank, had gone to the place and opening the door, called a witness and took possession of the stock and room. He had a claim also on the remaining property.

Neither of the Rosenfelds were seen today about the store. There are no other creditors that are known to be pressing their claims. It is rumored that the stock is not a large one. Whether or not the Rosenfelds intend returning to Marion is a matter of conjecture.

DECLIFF REJOICES

Over a Small Sprinkle of Rain—Interesting News Notes.

DeCliff, Oct. 31—We are having a sprinkle of rain today and it is very badly needed for the wheat as also to replenish the many empty cisterns and dried-up streams.

Uncle Jesse Postal, who has resided in our village so long, recently moved to LaRue.

Dallas Sims and family have also left here and moved near Upper Sandusky.

G. N. Mears received a telegram from Custer, Ohio, announcing that his son-in-law, Mr. Jones, who is so well known here, had received a fall and was not likely to live. Misses Maude Mears and Easter Day, nieces of Mr. Jones, started for there today to see their uncle.

Latest reports from the LaRue fair are to the effect that they will pay only thirty or forty cents on the dollar in paying premiums.

A car load of good hogs were shipped from here by Dick Irwin and Link Morral.

Wm. Bain is trying a new husking machine owned by D. Drake, which husks the corn and slits the fodder up fine for feeding.

Rev. Reading will preach Sabbath evening at DeCliff and expects at that time to commence a protracted meeting.

The sick people of our vicinity are all improving.

A son of Daniel Hickman was buried today who died from fever.

RESTORING THE PARTHENON.

The Old Greek Temple to Be Preserved From Further Decay.

It now seems probable that the remains of the Parthenon at Athens will be preserved from further decay, and eventually a complete restoration of the temple will be effected. The Greek Archæological society, which is reported to have at least $200,000 in its treasury, is now at work in arresting the disintegration of the ruins. The task of preservation is a very great one—greater, perhaps, than the rebuilding of the temple, for the ruins, especially the architrave in the eastern as well as the western front, are apparently ready to fall to pieces at the slightest shock, and should these architraves go the ruins will have lost their chief grandeur; nothing but the beautiful columns would remain. Mr. St. Clair presents the following facts, which are interesting enough to repeat:

"The ruins are yellow as crocus from age, and, since the new Pentelic marble is sugary white, the insertion of a new stone, they argue, would destroy all venerableness. But the real difficulty is not sentimental. It is how to take the ruins apart without destroying too much of them. Every good stone must be preserved, if possible, and the masonry is so complete that it was never meant to be disturbed. It has been suggested that the ruins be braced up with bronze rod ties and then let alone, but this would not arrest the disintegration that is steadily going on. New stones must be inserted, and if there is money enough the broken columns will be replaced and a temporary roof put on.

"Three eminent archæologists have been chosen to superintend the work of preservation of what is left of the great Phidias and Ictinus in this temple. They are Herr Durm of Germany, M. Magne of France and F. G. Penrose, the famous Englishman who discovered the lines of the Parthenon some 40 years ago. Mr. Penrose is the chief living authority on the principles of Greek architecture. He is now an old man, but without his personal supervision it is doubtful whether this important work could be undertaken with absolute confidence. For many years after Mr. Penrose published his investigations the widest diversity of opinion was entertained among contemporary archæologists as to the lines of the Parthenon. Mr. Penrose discovered that there was not a straight line in the temple, but that it was a series of curves from foundation to comb of roof, and that these curves described complete parabolas. He found the steps at the center of the building three inches higher than at the ends and the columns of the peristyle slightly sloping inward. He also found the proportions of the temple and reduced them to figures, and here was one of the chief secrets of its wonderful beauty.

"The Parthenon was not the largest of the Greek temples, it being only 230x102 feet, the peristyle columns being 30 feet in height and 6½ feet in diameter at the base, but the length, breadth and depth were as nearly absolute in their harmony and completeness of proportion as have ever been conceived. Nowhere else has such complete sweetness of proportion been approached, and it is in this one essential quality that the Parthenon will always stand out alone in the supremacy of its beauty. Had the edifice been six feet longer or two feet higher or three feet wider this harmony would have been spoiled. It has been urged if this complete harmony of proportion in this one building was not an accident, but it was perhaps no more so than the building itself, which was erected in the palmiest days of Athens, when Pericles was in authority and when Ictinus was invited to do his best."—Illustrated American.

An hour afterward a policeman and an express wagon made their appearance simultaneously in front of the McSwat mansion.

There was a brief but spirited action in the kitchen, and at its close Miss Esmeralda McGinnis, ex-kitchen girl of the McSwats, emerged from the building.

She was followed shortly by her personal baggage, all and singular, and with the assistance of the officer the entire outfit was loaded into the wagon and driven away, Esmeralda shaking her fist vehemently at the house and moving her chin volubly as long as she was in sight. Long after she had disappeared from view Billings McSwat sat in the room adjoining the kitchen, with his hat on, breathing hard, and occasionally darting a look of defiance through the solid door that separated him from the empty room.

ALIKE ARE RINGING

With the news of our low prices. We've exhaused the possibility of low prices--not as the fag end of the season, job lots, bankrupt creditor's sales, etc., etc., but in the establishment of year-around low prices for indisputably reliable goods. Certainly more than nine hundred ladies are advertising the Wraps bought at our wrap room this fall. No longer a question--are our wraps good and cheap? That iron-clad guarantee is back of every thing we sell, regardless of price.

[illegible] Collapse and Revival of a South[illegible]—Its Cosmopolitan Character, [illegible] Substantial Buildings, Its Wine and [illegible] Ores.

[Special Correspondence.]

[illegible], Ala., Oct. 28.—The Atlanta [illegible] is a big thing, of course, [illegible] show the south has ever [illegible] I grew tired of it. Street[s] [illegible] Atlanta just now are wonder[illegible], what with the bril[illegible] stores, the motley dress[illegible] colored people, the [illegible] and the many theaters [illegible] nightly. Yet one does get [illegible] in a hubbub, and Atlan[ta] [illegible] me. It was no [illegible] city, and so I was off for [illegible] mountains.

Where the Vine Flourishes.

[illegible] Georgia Pacific railway, by [illegible] traveled, took its ambitious [illegible] it was designed to run to [illegible] and connect with the [illegible] Pacific. It succeeded in get[ting] [illegible] Birmingham and is now [illegible] and a feeder to the Pied[mont] [illegible] line on the Great Southern. [illegible], it has on a string four of [illegible] remarkable places in our country—[illegible], Fruithurst, Anniston and [illegible]—and, strange to say, the [illegible] as yet unheard of in the north. ORE BEDS IN THE CITY LIMITS.

Here, then, if anywhere in the new world, can these exiles, can the French [illegible] perfectly naturalized and all [illegible] French wines produced. A large [illegible] company took the district in charge [illegible] a great success is assured.

The company has laid off the tract in [illegible] and each purchaser is re[quired] to plant two of his ten acres in [illegible]. If he does not care to do [illegible] the company does it for him [illegible] per acre. The chief exe[illegible]—Farciot, an Alsatian [illegible] had great experience in grape [illegible] Kelly's island in Lake Erie [illegible] enthusiast as to the possibili[ties]. I will not repeat his glowing [illegible] as they come to me second [illegible] most persistent statement [illegible] repeated hereabout—namely, [illegible] will make all these old [illegible] more valuable than the [illegible] land in the state. A phy[illegible] declared this section [illegible] the greatest health resort [illegible]. The elevation averages [illegible] above the sea, the summers [illegible] cooler than in the central [illegible] is of such a nature that [illegible] no mud, and for three [illegible] invalid can live on grapes [illegible] the vine, as is the regimen [illegible] German health resorts [illegible] a blessing which induces [illegible] to vary their mo[illegible] corn bread, fried pork [illegible], and I feel it a duty to [illegible] enterprises a good showing. A Point In Finance.

[illegible] foreigner comes, the [illegible] proverb in Ala[illegible] foreigner has come to Fruit[hurst] [illegible] "nigger" has gone, or [illegible] away, for there never were [illegible] in the hill country of [illegible] last registration showed [illegible], the most composite [illegible] any southern locality ex[illegible], Tex. There are [illegible] to have a flourishing [illegible] Hungarians, Bohemians [illegible], besides the Alsa[illegible] Yankees and Eng[illegible], of course, as [illegible] towns. I ask[illegible] who was [illegible] of the [illegible] congressional district [illegible] taking in one [illegible] of the black counties [illegible] exclusively white [illegible] asked my [illegible]. The result was [illegible] than in the car was on the point of his hoofs at once, and in less time than it takes to tell it a furious discussion was raging. The testimony was equally positive on both sides. A prominent iron man of Birmingham declared it a positive certainty that with the exception of Mobile, Memphis, one district in Florida and two in Kentucky, every district in the south would send delegates to the national Democratic convention in favor of free coinage at the [illegible] ratio. An Atlanta merchant said he had been traveling three months in the two states, and to his certain knowledge "this silver craze is over—nobody talks or cares about it—something has killed it." Maybe the interest is lessening, but the discussion in that car certainly did not show it.

As the Georgia Pacific runs nearly straight west and the mountain ranges nearly straight southwest, the road crosses them at a sharp angle, and the result is a peculiarly varied and diversified line. First we cross a level, then enter the red foothills and next wriggle through the main range on a course running to every point of the compass, to emerge into another high valley, and in the northwest of these is this very interesting city of Anniston. Two things strike the visitor with astonishment at the first view—the great number of fine residences on all the commanding points and the many truly magnificent churches. Brooklyn does not compare with it in that respect. The highest estimate of the population, including Oxanna and other suburbs, is 15,000, and it certainly is less than that. Yet there are 18 white churches and several colored. And some of the white churches might be called small cathedrals—imposing structures of gray and white stone which look as if they were built for all time. In truth, that is the great characteristic of the city. The founders evidently had faith in the future, for all the hotels, banks and general business structures are seemingly as solid as if in New York and Boston. No city looks less like a boom town, yet that is just what it is. Other cities have had booms, but this is the ideal boom city. It completely fills the bill. Probably no other city of its size in the country had so sudden and phenomenal a rise, and certainly none suffered a more complete and sudden collapse. But this collapse came in 1890, and the revival was in full progress by the time the rest of the country began to decline.

Anniston Enterprise.

"We knew nothing about the panic of 1893," said Colonel Hoffman Atkinson, president of the Anniston Land company. "We were so deep in the pit that it passed 100 degrees above us. In fact, that's about the time the revival began here. It was in 1890 that we fell. Our industries did not stand on the order of their dying, as Lady Macbeth said; they just died. They did not even lie down and die, as folks say; they just dropped dead in their tracks. I don't say that the failure of Baring Bros. did it, but soon after the news of that arrived the United States Car company stopped work. Then all the furnaces stopped in rapid succession on account of the low price of iron. The banks, with one small exception, held through in good shape and so did this land company, the only one in the south that did, I believe. Everything in the manufacturing line stopped, and we had to carry all the laboring people who didn't leave. You may imagine, then, how odd it sounded to our folks when speakers came along to tell them that congress had caused the trouble in 1893. We were over it by that time, and now you see that the vacant houses are filling up fast. Let me see—we have running now the big pipe works, the biggest in the world under one roof, making 200 tons of heavy iron pipe a day, the Hercules Pipe works, 46 tons a day of small pipe; the Anniston Manufacturing company's cotton mill, which has always paid good dividends; the Anniston Cordage mills, also making webbing looms and cotton carpets; the Woodstock Iron furnace, 125 tons of pig iron a day; the Anniston Lime works, two large [illegible] establishments, three machine and other shops and many minor works.

"There's a romance about the building of Anniston. The founders made their money [illegible] and made [illegible]. [illegible] they stacked it away, and when the [illegible] their profits [illegible] were [illegible] ly generous. [illegible] that splendid church of [illegible] and All Angels [illegible] that was built by [illegible] as a monument to his [illegible]—all of stone and marble. And Grace Episcopal church was built by the company at a cost of [illegible], [illegible] and two other churches [illegible]. In fact, there isn't a [illegible] church in the [illegible] of the red, and the [illegible] of the founders did it. Now [illegible] future. We concede [illegible] make iron a little [illegible] than we can, [illegible] future [illegible] manufacturing."

[illegible] hair and serge [illegible] are also seen in great numbers and [illegible] are particularly attractive. Some of these plaids have a light ground [illegible] straight or waved [illegible] of black silk or wool. Velvet is a feature of the season in both plain and fancy weaves, velours de genes with immense flowers being employed for toilets of ceremony.

Astrakhan is largely used for trimming, being applied in flat bands and tabs. Capes entirely of astrakhan are a la mode and are warm without being heavy.

The winter's sleeves are large, but decidedly drooping. Skirts are also large and retain the godet, but are less bell shaped than they were, being cut with less slant, and thus having more fullness gathered in at the waistband. The fashionable skirt is lined with silk throughout.

The blouse bodice, differing from the skirt, has not yet retired from favor and will probably remain in vogue all winter, but a bodice like the skirt is seen on many of the newest gown models. These bodices are very much trimmed.

Beaded trimmings are in high repute just now. Motifs of embroidery outlined with gold or silver, spangles and elaborate jeweled buttons are prominent characteristics of this season's trimming. It is probable that the seams of skirts and bodices will be outlined with narrow passementerie of jet, metal threads or spangles in order to give a touch of brilliancy to the rich materials employed for gowns.

The sketch shows a gown of changeable mauve taffeta with black satin stripes. The godet skirt is edged with a torsade of darker mauve changeable velvet, fastened with tiny clusters of yellow, red and mauve flowers. The gathered bodice has a full chemisette of silver gray gauze around which is a bertha of loops of changeable velvet. The collar is embroidered with silver. The balloon elbow sleeves have a cuff of plaited gray gauze. The belt is of changeable velvet and is adorned with a spray of flowers, flowers being also placed at the shoulders and bosom.

TRIMMINGS AND MATERIALS.

Braid Passementerie and Fashionable Waist Trimmings—Velvet Much Worn.

Full fronted waists continue to be worn and the best effect is produced by having the fullness stop at the second dart in which it is fastened. This prevents the untidy, baggy look which results from allowing the front to be loose to the under arm seam.

Enormous quantities of braid, embroidery, gimp and passementerie are employed on the fashionable bodice. Entire yokes are made of passementerie, which is also used to form tight fitting vests under jacket fronted gowns. This renders the corsage very heavy, but fashion is absolutely indifferent to such considerations, quite as much so indeed as if her votaries were mere wooden dummies.

Some women have their gown bodices made perfectly plain and simply piped around the neck, relying upon an adjustable collarette, plastron or other trimming for the necessary effect of elaborate finish.

Richness of material and trimming is the keynote of all winter fashions, and the pitch is rather a high one for women of moderate purse, especially if they are not skillful with the needle themselves. The dressmaker's bill increases with the elegance of the material upon which she works, and women who can make a gown for themselves occasionally save an appreciable amount of money in the year.

Velvet is the material of the season for gowns, wraps and millinery. It is said that manufacturers are expecting a run on that fabric and are making their arrangements accordingly. Fur will serve as trimming with rich passementeries composed of beads and metal effects, embroidery and heavy lace. Thick fancy silks have also a great vogue.

The sketch shows a walking gown of mauve petunia cloth. The godet skirt, which is treated very godet, is finished around the foot with five horizontal plaits or tucks. The blouse bodice has a yoke of deep petunia velvet which extends in a plait down the front. Below the yoke are three horizontal plaits of cloth. The sleeves consist of two puffs of petunia cloth and a deep cuff of velvet. The upper puff has four horizontal plaits and is separated from the lower by a band of plaits. A toque of petunia velvet trimmed with yellow flowers and black quilles completes the costume.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

The Jewel Box Wherein Fashionable Folk Inclose That Precious Gem, the Cook.

Perfect ventilation, says an architect who is authority on kitchens, is the first consideration in such a room. Next come light and the possibilities of perfect cleanliness. To get these in a crowded city block half buried in the ground is, of all things, the most difficult. Something has been said of the movement upward in private houses by reason of the introduction of elevators. One of the most significant indications is seen in the elevation of the kitchen.

In the house of a New York physician all the household offices are on the top floor. The servants' bedrooms are in front. Midway is the laundry, with tiled floor and wainscoting. Connecting with it is the servants' sitting room, and opening into the kitchen. One may well envy the cook her private domain. The kitchen is a noble room, with windows that catch the first rays of the morning sun and the last rays of his benign majesty in the west. The view is fine for a hemmed in city house. The practical mind discovers other advantages in the saving of gas bills—there is over an hour of daylight more here than the basement kitchen receives. There is also a considerable saving of time, as the ragman and the peddlers of wares soon discover that there is neither pleasure nor profit in the area.

The kitchens in some of the apartment houses are beautiful indeed. These are small, but calculated to a nicety. In fact, except when there is a large staff of servants, it is a mistake to have a large kitchen. It wastes time and takes the strength of the cook to cover more space than is necessary. As these kitchens are placed in the least desirable parts of the house, every care is taken to give them all the light and air possible. The floors are tiled. The walls are covered with white enameled tiles, sometimes made gayer with tiles of pink and blue. The sinks are porcelain lined, and the faucets silver plated. The cupboards and dressers are in light natural woods, and the glass unspotted. The cook feels that she is a precious thing inclosed in a jewel box, and one may hope that she strives to live up to the situation, remarks a New York journal.

Drapery Silks.

For interior decoration, such as curtains and draperies, many of the Japanese silks recommend themselves. The Shiki silks are very attractive. They are woven of rough and irregular threads, which give to the surface an uneven appearance that is rich and artistic in effect. The prevailing colors are old blue, gold, sage, olive and shrimp pink; the width is 36 inches and the price $1.

Of late, printed Shiki silks have appeared, the pattern either in stripes or floral effects, and for these $1.15 per yard is asked. The embroidered Shiki silks show the same colorings as above, with the embroidery in gold and silver threads and floss silk.

Chijimi crape is a charming material for interior decoration. It is in blue and white, showing various floral and geometrical designs of dark or colonial blue in a white ground. It is 30 inches in width and is sold for 40 cents per yard.

The Decorator and Furnisher, authority for the foregoing, also illustrates some very tasteful fashions of draping doors and windows; among them is the accompanying attractive window drapery.

Potato Soup.

Wash and pare three potatoes and let them soak in cold water for half an hour. Put them into boiling water and cook very soft. Put a pint of milk on to boil in a double boiler, with a teaspoonful of chopped onion. When the potatoes are very soft, drain thoroughly and mash them. Add them to the boiling milk and season with a teaspoonful of salt and a dash or two of red pepper. Rub through a strainer and put on to heat again. Melt a tablespoonful of butter and stir into it one-half tablespoonful of flour. When well mixed, add enough of the soup to make it liquid, and then stir it into the boiling soup. Let it boil five minutes and serve very hot.

Perfumed Butter.

A household authority tells that perfumed butter is becoming fashionable at American breakfast and tea tables. The butter is made into pats and stamped with a floral design and is then wrapped in thin cheesecloth and placed on a bed of roses, violets or carnations arranged in a flat bottomed dish. Over these is placed a layer of flowers, so that the butter patties are imbedded in flowers. They are then placed on ice, where they are allowed to remain for several hours. This butter is eaten with crisp Vienna rolls, accompanied only by a cup of chocolate or delicious mocha.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS.

Why a Retiring Little Plant Is Called a Walking Fern.

Among the fern lover's most delightful experiences must always be numbered his first sight of the curious little walking leaf, Camptosorus rhizophyllus link. From the time that he begins to take an interest in ferns he is always on the lookout for this famous member of the order, but unless the geological formation of his locality is just right he may look long in vain. A writer in Popular Science News explains that this is a rare and retiring little plant and a bit particular in regard to its habitat, loving the limestone rocks and seldom straying far into uncongenial ground, but has recently been discovered growing on sandstone and gneiss in a few localities.

Of all the species of North American ferns there is none that loves the shade more than the walking fern. Apparently it cannot endure the sun's rays and must be sought in ravines and deep woods, where there is perpetual twilight. It loves to carpet the shelves and ledges of shaded precipices, where its roots may come in contact with the cool gray rocks.

The rarity of the walking fern gives an added incentive to its discovery, but even those who are familiar with our common ferns might easily pass it by, little thinking that those strange tapering leaves were fern fronds. These fronds seldom exceed a length of 9 inches, although some have been found 16 inches in length.

When the spores (which are borne on the underside of the fronds) are ripe, the spore cases burst, and the microscopic spores settling in favorable places develop tiny "prothalli," from which in time new ferns rise. At best this is a slow process, and several ferns have learned easier and quicker ways. One American fern bears little bulblets on its fronds, which drop to earth and take root. Another sends out subterranean runners, which produce a new plant at the end. The subject of the sketch has still another method. The tapering fronds bend over until the tips touch the earth, where they strike root and produce a new plant. In this way it takes one step after another and earns the name of the "walking fern."

A shows the spore cases, B a frond, which is of no use for walking, and C a new plant.

The Nervous Tissue of the Brain.

M. Vitzon of Bucharest has demonstrated that the nervous tissue in the brain will grow again after it has been removed, at least in monkeys. He removed completely the occipital lobes of a monkey's brain by trepanning, thereby rendering it blind. Active nutrition was kept up for the rest of the organ, when in the fourth month after the operation the monkey began to distinguish objects dimly, and after some months more was able to make its way about. Two years after the trepanned spaces were again uncovered, and a substance found which, on examination, was found to contain pyramidal nervous cells and nervous fibers.

A Mysterious Performance.

Show your friends an empty bottle, stopped by a cork. Under this cork you will have fixed a bent pin, to which is attached a piece of thread. A shoe button or other body of slight weight suspended to the thread will make it hang straight. Announce to the spectators that you are going to cut the thread without touching either the cork or the bottle, and, to prevent the least suspicion of fraud, seal up the cork and the neck of the bottle with wax. You will leave the room a minute with the bottle, and return with it in your hand, showing that the thread is cut clean through, with the end thereof lying at the bottom, together with the button that was attached to it.

CUTTING A THREAD IN A SEALED BOTTLE.

As the illustration shows by what means the thread has been cut, it is only necessary to say further that the experiment must not be made at night or in a cloudy day, as it is the sun which is chief assistant at the performance. By means of a converging sunglass you concentrate the rays of the sun on one point of the thread, and in order to facilitate the operation use black thread, as this will better absorb the caloric rays and burn more readily. A bottle made of clear or light glass will be preferable to an ordinary wineglass.

Paper Cans For Food Products.

Cans made of paper pulp are introduced to take the place of tin cans for containing all kinds of preserved products. Millions of tin cans are used annually by canned goods factories in this country, and cases of injury from tainted goods are comparatively rare, but because it is possible, through slight defects in the solder or minute breaks in the cans, for such disasters to result, the canners have been looking for a satisfactory substitute for tin. A [illegible] paper says it is believed that this [illegible] last been found in the paper pulp cans.

HER WRITING TABLE.

"Now I am going [illegible] request," says [illegible] writing table [illegible] to write a letter. [illegible] want [illegible] with [illegible] She [illegible] "Write [illegible] were [illegible] I keep in there to [illegible] addresses in it. [illegible] I have [illegible] prettiest [illegible] ways better [illegible] number when [illegible] you. [illegible]"

It there is everything I want at the writing table [illegible] Of course I wouldn't [illegible] together [illegible] two.

The principal articles on the table are as follows: A [illegible] with a group of silver [illegible] on the [illegible] two [illegible] flowers [illegible] pot with [illegible], a patent contrivance for moistening stamps, two large pockets of dress patterns [illegible], a massive silver inkstand with a receptacle for ink about the size of [illegible] side, a knowing looking [illegible] without a key, a china monkey, two quill pens with broad points, their feathers still [illegible] in a scrapbook, a photograph frame of unmentionable metal, a case for postcards, a case for twine, a case for almanac cards, a case for stamps (all these empty) and a case for Bradshaw (also).

"Oh, do you want some note paper?" my lady exclaims, in a tone in which natural surprise mingles with pretty impatience for not having noticed my want sooner. "It is in the right hand drawer. You open it with a paper knife—look, like this."

"I'm afraid there is no note paper here," says my lady, pushing her slender hand, lace ruffles and all to the back of the drawer and pulling out some more dress patterns and a quantity of unpaid bills. "But I'll run and get some from papa's study."

"Oh, no, don't."

"Why not?"

"I don't know. Stay here. Show me again how this drawer opens."

"Nonsense, the drawer is open, and it is nearly post time."

"My letter is not important."

"But you said it was."

"I don't think it is now."

"Oh," rather quickly, "I think I should like to get you that note paper."

"And now"—laying it before me—"you must write your letter quickly if you want to get it off in time. And you mustn't talk any more."

"I won't. But isn't there something rather lumpy in this blotting book?"

"Oh, yes, that is chocolate. I always keep it in the pocket of my blotter, and then my maid doesn't eat it. Take it out while you are writing, but put it back again."

"Won't you take it out for me?"

"No. But you may eat some of it if you like."

My lady sits down in a basket chair—it creaks delightfully—and takes her kitten on her knee. The kitten makes playful pats at her with his paws, crouches down on her knee and springs at her hand, fastening his claws in her lace. My lady shakes her head reprovingly, then seizes him and holds him close to her and pretends to kiss him.

"You don't seem to be getting on with your letter very quickly."

"I can't bear to sit here and see that cat destroy your ruffles."

"Kitty and I will take another chair."

"Come now, that's not fair."

"It's nearly post time. You really must get on with that letter."

"Well, will you go back and sit in the basket chair?"

"No."

"I can't write unless you do."

"That's silly."

"It is true."

"Oh, well."

The basket chair begins to creak again.

I wish I could remember what I was going to say in this letter. I really would get on with it if I could, but for the life of me I can't remember what I was going to write about. The kitten has gone on a tour of discovery round the room, and my lady sits with lightly folded hands looking out of the window.

The china monkey grins at me. I do wish I could remember what I wanted to say. I suck the top of my pen. It tastes bad.

Presently my lady looks round. When she turns her head, it just makes a man feel inclined to stare helplessly at her and wonder how she does it. All the old similes about swanlike movements and flowerlike grace seem horribly inadequate when my lady turns her head. She bends it a little forward as she turns it, and one sees the wonderful lines of her neck and shoulder and the contour of her cheek, clear cut against the light from the window.

"You are quite sure you have everything you want?"

It is possible that she has been expecting to hear the scratching of my pen on the paper for some time past.

"I am quite sure I have it."

"Oh, I am so sorry," says my lady. She rises from her chair and comes half way across the room toward me. Then she sees me looking at her, and she stops.

"You know I meant writing materials," she says, with terrible severity.

"But there isn't any ink."

"Oh, dear! Has it dried up again?"

"I [illegible] to cure these [illegible] are not [illegible]."

"Oh, and [illegible] post time! What will [illegible] I'm afraid it is all my fault."

"I am [illegible]."

"I really did think there was everything in [illegible]. Then again [illegible] What will [illegible]."

"I [illegible] for a walk in the garden with you."

"Oh, but I [illegible]."

"Still I [illegible] think you ought to do something [illegible] for making me [illegible]."

"Well, it must only be for a few minutes [illegible]."

[illegible] hours later when, having [illegible] the garden [illegible] I never can remember how [illegible] to the house. As we [illegible] my lady is saying [illegible] "And I'll always help you to write [illegible] letters and your writing table shall have paper and [illegible] and everything you want in it."—New Budget.

Salt.

It is estimated that the ocean and seas of our globe hold not less than [illegible] tons of salt in solution. [illegible] [illegible] would [illegible] [illegible] deposit [illegible] feet [illegible] [illegible] covering 1,500 feet thick.

BANKRUPTCY

—of the physical being is the result of drawing incessantly upon the reserve capital of nerve force. The wear, tear and strain of modern life are concentrated upon the nervous system. The young men of our day become sufferers from nervous debility or exhaustion, nervous prostration or weakness. This may be the result of too much mental worry and excitement, or the result of bad practices and excesses, or pernicious habits, contracted in youth, through ignorance. They feel irritable, weak and nervous with such distressing symptoms as backache, dizziness, shooting pains in head or chest, sometimes indigestion. The middle-aged men, as well suffer from exhaustion, loss of manly power, low spirits, impaired memory, and many derangements of mind and body. The ill-used brain is morbidly wide awake when the overworked business man attempts to find rest in bed.

The physicians and specialists of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute devote their best energies to reclaiming and restoring such unfortunates to health and happiness. They have written a book of 168 pages, treating of these maladies and setting forth a rational means of home treatment for their cure. It is sent securely sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of 10 cents for postage.

RAPID TRANSIT IN CHINA.

Li Hung Chang Took a Ride First, Then Took the Furniture.

A most interesting report upon Chinese railroads is furnished to the state department by United States Consul Read, at Tientsin. He tells of the difficulties that were encountered by the young English engineer who ran the first locomotive in overcoming the superstitious natives, who called his locomotive the "iron dragon." The road ran from Tientsin to Shan-Ching-Hawn, and he gives the following incident of the first trip by steam of Li Hung Chang.

"As director general of the road he was given a special car. This was furnished with elaborate chairs, lounges, tables, etc., upholstered in silk and satin. Li on his first trip was profuse in his expressions of admiration. Upon his return to Tientsin his satisfaction had reached such a point that he ordered all the furniture, hangings, etc., to be removed to his yamen. To the disappointment of the great viceroy, the special features of the car—the luxurious bed—was left behind, as it had been built into the car. The directors learned a lesson and the viceroy's new private car has furniture that cannot be removed."—Philadelphia Press.

FESTIVITIES GALORE

OCCUR THURSDAY EVENING IN CELEBRATION OF HALLOWEEN.

The Kerr House Is the Scene of Much Social Enjoyment—Those Present—The Cookies Entertain at the Stowe Home. Other Functions.

Without doubt the largest and [illegible] al, the most successful Halloween entertainment ever given by [illegible] married people in [illegible] was that of Thursday evening at the New Kerr House

Preparations had been made for a goodly attendance but it was not supposed that the dining hall would be filled and two tables set in the parlors from the overflow [illegible] tors of the entertainment

The young married people secured their emancipation [illegible] the foolishness which is supposed to be characteristic of those unfortunates who have not taken partners for better or for worse, and instead of the usual tactics employed on Halloween they went directly to the hotel and there partners for the evening were selected by lot

The early part of the evening was spent in an exchange of ideas by those assembled, on subjects domestic, social, political and what not, all being delightfully entertained, meanwhile by the Marion Grand orchestra, which excelled itself

It was fully 10 o'clock when the doors of the dining hall were thrown open and the elaborate spread disclosed to the guests. That the menu met with the approval of all goes without saying

There were no oratorical fireworks, not even the customary address of welcome nor one single little inoffensive toast. The young people were there to make merry and as soon as the banquet hall was emptied the floor was cleared for dancing.

The grand march was lead by Mr. L. K. Uhler and Miss Uhler and Mr C. B. King and Mrs E. K. Uhler, and from that time on dancing was indulged until about 1 o'clock, the square dances being made especially enjoyable by the presence of a professional caller from [illegible]

The "Reigning Queens" are to be congratulated over the success of the entertainment, for a more enjoyable evening or one whereon less formality was shown has never been known in the social circles of our city It was distinctly a go-as-you-please, be-happy-and-enjoy-yourself affair and it was probably owing to that, and the added fact that it was not a dress event, that those present had so unfeignedly enjoyable an evening.

Those present were Mr and Mrs John J. Darmody, Mr and Mrs H. W. Culbertson, Mr and Mrs C. C. Fisher, Mr and Mrs C. B. King Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Padgett, Mr and Mrs. J. W. Armstrong, Mr and Mrs H. At 10 o'clock elegant refreshments were served The occasion was a most delightful one

The Marguerites.

That pretty bevy of misses who style themselves the Marguerites were entertained, Thursday evening at the home of Miss Nellie Bever, south High street. The Marguerites comprise a membership of an even dozen and on this occasion they were joined by an equal number of young gentlemen friends, making a congenial and happy company, who reveled in the complete enjoyment of the occasion.

The Big Six.

The Big Six were entertained by Miss Laura Langley, on Windsor street Thursday evening They had a very enjoyable time There were refreshments and lots of them, games and shows, lots of things that the six youngsters enjoyed hugely.

Old Customs Observed.

Mr and Mrs James Williams entertained a few friends, Thursday evening in honor of the old customs of Halloween There were just three families present, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith Entertain

Mr and Mrs Will Smith, assisted by Miss Edith Green, entertained at their home, on Windsor street, Thursday evening, and it proved to be a very delightful affair

Whist and pedro made up the entertainment of the evening with choice refreshments and a pleasant conversation. Miss Zoe King won first honors in a souvenir spoon and Charles Haberman won the gentleman's honors in a fancy pack of cards Miss Anna Wyatt and F. E. Guthery won prizes also.

Here's Another.

The Happy-go-Lucky club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Ayear on west Church street, Thursday evening The ladies found a hiding place at the Rauhauser home and there their gentlemen friends were obliged to discover them They enjoyed games, good things and had a very "swell" time, so to speak.

Miss Kauble's Guests.

Miss Zella Kauble very pleasantly entertained a company composed of about thirty of her most intimate friends and associates, at the home of her friend, Miss Princess Arnhalt, Thursday evening The time was joyously passed in social games and amusements At 10 o'clock the beautifully decorated dining rooms were thrown open and disclosed the large tables laden with a most tempting feast which had been prepared by the coterie of young ladies present.

NOVEL RAILROADING.

Long Island's Monopoly Likely to Be Broken.

[illegible]

Brooklyn, Oct [illegible]—[illegible] [illegible] New [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] enough to support [illegible] Long Island R[illegible] [illegible] All talk of [illegible] and there has [illegible] [illegible] of the situation

Now, however, [illegible] road company is [illegible] and the work of construction [illegible] contracts have been awarded for the [illegible] of the first [illegible] of the road. The new corporation is called the Kings, Queens and Suffolk R[illegible] company. The section is to be built from Brooklyn to Far Rockaway. The plan of construction is one that would be regarded with suspicion [illegible] experimental road two miles [illegible] in successful operation for two years.

The plan can best be described in a few words as a combination of the elevated railroad system, electricity or the trolley system and the safety bicycle. A [illegible] at the accompanying cut will [illegible] its principal features, and a few [illegible] will make them easy to understand.

One element of safety will be the avoidance of grade crossings. The elevated structure makes it impossible for either people to get on the track. This is an advantage Long Island people have learned to appreciate, as accidents have always been frequent at the crossings, more than 500 in number of the existing railroad.

The second advantage claimed is the economy and speed of the overhead wire system. By running trolley cars above the ground all the objections urged against trolley roads on the surface are avoided and all their advantages are retained. As is well known, the speed of the electric car is only limited by the [illegible] of its construction and the [illegible] of its operation, and the K., Q. and S. company claim that with their system they can drive their cars 100 miles an hour if desirable.

The third step accounted progressive by the company is the adoption of the [illegible] rail on which the cars travel. Each car running on two wheels, fore and aft, resembles the principle of the safety bicycle, and as a precaution a guide rail overhead keeps the car in exact alignment, so that there is no running off the track to be feared. Neither can the track spread.

This last feature, while it will seem new to many readers, is not really new. For many years the patent office at Washington has been receiving applications for patents on this idea and numerous patents have been issued. The system first [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] M. Boynton, but modified and improved it very materially after pured, and then, by applying the electricity just as the trolley cars do, we drive our light machine at a speed and with safety elsewhere unknown in the world today."

[illegible]

[illegible] cannot in no wise be m[illegible]

Whether it will be followed by the construction of similar roads in other sections of the country cannot easily be foretold, for railroad business on Long Island is peculiar in many respects. Its freight carriage is comparatively small, and the great majority of the passengers go to and from one end of the road. These conditions are naturally favorable to the new enterprise but whether they will be essential to its success is a question for experts, not for [illegible]

BURN POCAHONTAS COAL.

A PARODY ON LONGFELLOW'S EXCELSIOR.

The shades of night were falling fast,
As through the streets of Marion passed,
A kid, who bore, all lettered nice,
A banner bearing this device,
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

His brow was hid: his eye beneath,
Gazed on a "snipe" between his teeth,
And like an empty coal hod rung
The accents of that urchin's tongue,
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

In liquor stores he saw the light,
In drug stores all the bottles bright;
He loafed around the old jail door,
While hundreds read the sign he bore,
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

"Oh, stay," the young girl said, "and here
Partake of meat and drink to cheer."
He raised his arm and pointed high,
And she looked up and made reply,
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

"Beware some certain streets, beware:
They sell poor coal and fool you there!"
This was the watchman's last good night,
But still he kept that sign in sight—
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

At break of day, with shoeless feet,
The kid was found on Center street;
Beside him lay the well-worn sign
Besmeared with mud—BUT NOT THE LINE,
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

There in the morning, cold and gray,
Wrapt in slumber the urchin lay,
And from the crowd that loitered near,
Escaped a voice that all could hear:
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

This was the maid that asked the kid
To eat, ere down the street he slid,—
John Smith's old girl, with heart and soul,
In sunlight on a lump of coal,
"BURN POCAHONTAS COAL!"

ABSOLUTELY FALSE

IS THE STORY OF REPUBLICANS TRADING FOR SHAW

A Local Democratic Organ Sprung a Blooming Fake When It Published That Story—It Is a Scheme of the Campaign

Last night the senior organ of the democracy published a sensational statement that there was treachery among Marion county republicans and that the friends of Moore, Pennell and Morral, republican candidates, were furious because those candidates were being sacrificed to save Joe Shaw, the republican candidate for sheriff. Of course the whole story is a blooming fake. One republican said it was a Mirror nightmare due to a frightful dream of the possible loss of the sheriff's advertising. Many republicans laugh at the foolish story. The Star denies it in the interest of truth. The campaign doesn't require any such silly misrepresentation. The simple truth is that Shaw, Moore and Morral particularly are making a hustling campaign. Each man is working for the success of his own candidacy and doing what he can for his ticket. There is the finest harmony among all of them. Moore, Morral or Pennell could not be convinced that Shaw is in any way trading for them nor is Shaw fearful of any of them trading him. The quartet are in fullest harmony and thorough loyalty to each other.

The story was manifestly sprung to injure Shaw, who is the chief target of the campaign. It was thought that it might create dissension among republicans and some of their friends. It is all bosh. Joe Shaw has authorized the offer of $50 to any man in the county who will say he ever proposed a trade of any kind to a voter in any party. The story will deceive no one. The columns of the Star are open to any one, Democrat or Republican, Prohibitionist or Populist, who will offer proof of any kind of trading on the part of Shaw, Moore or Morral.

SCHOLARS' MATINEE

At the Y. M. C. A. Hall Tomorrow Afternoon

There will be rendered at the Y. M. C. A. hall tomorrow afternoon an educational matinee for scholars and teachers. Doors open at 2 p. m., performance commences at 2 30.

A practical method of drawing letters by blackboard illustration, ventriloquism, parlor magic, Humpty Dumpty, Punch and Judy, etc., go to make up the program. Cards are being circulated to scholars which together with 10 cents entitles a child to any seat in the house. The management requests all to turn out and give them a well filled house. The parents as well as the little ones are assured of an enjoyable as well as profitable time, as the entertainment comes highly recommended. 1

THE SENATE CONTROL

REGARDED BY MANY AS THE QUESTION OF THE DAY

Other Questions Depend In a Measure Upon That—Sen[illegible] Sherman's Policy—How This Would Affect the Presidential Campaign—A Wide Discussion

Many politicians in conversation declare that the leading question of the [illegible] is the policy to be determined in getting the control of the senate. The other questions in a large measure depend upon that—will be shaped by that [illegible] the [illegible] of the Republicans [illegible] control [illegible] accept full responsibility [illegible] will [illegible] [illegible]. The Republicans are divided as to what the [illegible] demand. Mr Sherman is against the assumption of full responsibility by his party. No satisfactory combination can in his judgment be effected. What agreement is possible between the Republicans and the Populists on the question of finance and the tariff? The one party is for high tariff, the other for low tariff. The one party is for a carefully guarded bimetallism, the other for free coinage by the United States without regard to the attitude of [illegible] nations. "Gentlemen," said the man with the yaller whiskers as the talk turned on mosquitoes, "I believe in giving every insect a fair show, and I'm not the man to talk against a mosquito behind its back. I never had an adventure worth relating with the pests, but my brother had. My brother was a sober, conscientious man, and I never knew him to exaggerate in the slightest."

"Where did this adventure happen?" cautiously queried the man with the stub nose.

"Down in the swamps of Louisiana, sir. My brother was one of the engineers on a railroad survey. One day, while all alone and making his way through a swamp with the water up to his waist, a mosquito suddenly rushed upon him and bit him in the thigh. But for his desperate efforts my brother would have been killed then and there. As it was, he was laid up for three months."

"Your brother told that yarn, did he?" sneered the man with the double chin.

"Certainly he did," replied the man with the yaller whiskers. "As I said before, my brother never exaggerated. I am a liar myself, but he was the soul of truth."

"Your brother saw the mosquito, of course?"

"Of course. He said it was fully nine feet long, and the spread of its [illegible] would take in a nail keg. When it rushed at him it splashed water 20 feet high."

"Look here, my friend," said the stub nosed man, "don't it ever occur to you that it was an alligator and not a mosquito which attacked your brother?"

"Never! My brother was a man with the highest respect for truth. If it had been an alligator he would have said so. I might have lied about it, but nothing could have tempted him to. And then he said the thing flew away after being beaten off. Now, do alligators fly?"

"Is your brother still living?" asked the man with a double chin, as his neck began to redden.

"Alas, sir, he is dead. Yes, he died as he lived—a truthful man. Why do you ask?"

"Oh! I wanted to call him a liar on a postal card, but he probably doesn't get any mail where he is now."

"You think he lied, do you?"

"I'm sure of it."

"Then, gentlemen, you will please excuse me from any further part in this conversation. I am a liar myself, as I have admitted, but I cannot stand it to hear my dead brother slandered. He said the mosquito [illegible] he said it flew, and [illegible] an alligator, I will withdraw and [illegible] what my brother said [illegible] the mosquito [illegible] it [illegible] wings!"

[illegible] he yelled at the man in the next flat. "Did I hear you say that you were intending to thrash that boy of yours?"

"What's that to you?" asked the man in the next flat sharply.

"What's that to me?" he repeated in [illegible]. "Great jumping Jupiter! Don't you suppose I have any interest in the affair?"

"No."

"Howling dervishes! And here I've lived in the next flat to you for five months. Don't you suppose I have a right to display a little interest in an affair of so much general importance to us all? Can't I give an occasional bit of advice without being jumped on as if I were an interloper?"

"No one asked you for any advice."

"Of course not, but there are times when a man is impelled to offer it without waiting to be asked. I've sat here in my flat, sir, for the last five months and heard you threaten on an average [illegible] twice a day to lick the tar out of that boy, and until now I haven't said a word."

"Well, what if you have? He's my boy, isn't he?"

"Of course he is."

"Then I'll do what I please in the line of disciplining him, and I don't want any members of the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Children interfering either. I'll whale him till he can't walk, and whale you, too, if you try to stop me."

Fire Apparatus In the American Colonies.

The early settlers in America paid no attention toward protecting themselves against fire, and the different colonies had grown into fair sized communities with several industries well established before any steps were taken in that direction. [illegible] the earliest movement [illegible] protection was made at Salem, Mass., in 1643 [illegible]

STORIES OF HEROISM.

Napoleon's Daring Stroke at Jena.

Oct. 14, 1806, Napoleon won two great battles and brought the monarchy of Frederick the Great under his heel. Marching rapidly upon Berlin with two columns, he found the road blocked at Jena by Prince Hohenlohe with 100,000 men. The Prussians were on the plains behind the heights of Landgrafenberg, which were so steep as to be deemed impassable. Discovering a narrow pathway up the steep side, Napoleon cut a road in one night and massed upon a rock just out of view of Hohenlohe's pickets, 10,000 soldiers with their cannon. Under cover of a fog Lannes thrust forward his division. The cannon firing scattered the fog and disclosed to Hohenlohe 90,000 Frenchmen opposed to his 60,000. Lannes was checked for a time and also Augereau, Soult and Ney. At 10 o'clock Napoleon sent in Murat's cavalry and his imperial guard against the stolid Prussian squares. A corps of 20,000 Saxons stood the brunt of the fight, parrying with bayonets the sword thrusts of Murat's horsemen until square after square had been broken. Finally a rout began in the Prussian lines and a reserve of 20,000 horsemen, led by General Ruchel, galloped forward to cover the retreat. Ruchel placed himself in front of the flying troops and died heroically, but vainly striving to save the line. More than 15,000 Prussians lay dead and wounded on the field. Napoleon put his entire army in pursuit, driving the enemy in an opposite direction from Berlin.

A Brave Battle Against Odds.

Oct. 14, 1806, Marshal Davoust won a noble title by scoring a victory complementary to that of Napoleon at Jena. Davoust's orders from his chief were to cut the road to Berlin and prevent the Prussian king from reinforcing Prince Hohenlohe at Jena. On the heights of Sonnenberg, at Auerstadt, the column of 26,000 encountered 80,000 Prussians led by the king and the Duke of Brunswick. As at Jena, a fog favored the French. Brunswick appealed to his men to clear the road to Berlin with their bayonets and led them against Davoust's cannon. Showers of missiles tore through the intrepid ranks. The duke and two marshals fell, with scores of their bravest officers. The king and Prince William dashed forward at the head of the reserves. The prince fell wounded, and the king was twice unhorsed. Then Davoust, finding his center firm and its front strewn with fallen enemies, launched forth his right to seize the Berlin road. That done, he ordered a charge from the center. At a single blow he captured 22 guns in battery. In despair the king ordered the army to retreat and countermarch upon Jena to unite with Hohenlohe. Bernadotte, with his corps d'armee of 20,000 men, had meanwhile penetrated to the Berlin road, between Auerstadt and Jena. So the fleeing battalion of the king, on the march, as they supposed, to the succoring camps of Hohenlohe, ran upon the fresh bayonets of Bernadotte's men.

DAVOUST.

Davoust bore a charmed life at Auerstadt, which cost him 7,000 killed and wounded. In the wild storm that struck down Prussia's king and prince and duke and marshals, he moved about unscathed, although his uniform was pierced many times and his bodyguard was in the end annihilated.

The "Battle of the Nations."

Oct. 16 and 18, 1813, was fought the great battle of Leipsic. The allied armies of England, Prussia, Russia, Spain and Sweden mustered 300,000 soldiers, against 175,000 French. Napoleon saw at the close of the first day's fighting that his army would be compelled to retreat. The second day's struggle on the part of the emperor was to extricate his army. "During this eventful day," wrote Sir Walter Scott, "in which he might be said to fight less for victory than for safety, this wonderful man continued calm, decided, collected, and supported his diminished and broken squadrons in their valiant defense with a presence of mind as determined as he had so often [illegible] in directing the tide of onward victory. At 3 o'clock that day the [illegible] and the Wurttemberg [illegible] strong, deserted from Napoleon [illegible] to the enemy, turning [illegible] sabers and bayonets [illegible] comrades. SKIRTS AND CORSAGES.

Velvet flowers, having been [illegible] are now to be as [illegible] as they were previously rejected [illegible] are not only employed largely [illegible] have [illegible] appear as the trimming of the dress [illegible] being the favorite blossom for that purpose.

Skirts are more frequently adorned than they were, but the perfectly plain skirt still continues fashionable. No very great amount of trimming can be [illegible] as long as skirts are so bulky and heavy in themselves as they now are. When skirt trimmings are out, loads of trimming will [illegible] come in. Just now a favorite fashion of adornment is to leave the seams open [illegible] the way up and fill the space with folds [illegible] a puffing of contrasting material of some [illegible] The edges of the openings are [illegible] bordered or ornamented with an applique [illegible]

Skirts and bodices are now trimmed to match, which gives costumes a more uniform appearance than they have presented hitherto. Long shoulder seams, or rather, sleeves set in below the point of the shoulder and made tight at the tops, are seen on many gowns, but they do not prevail and it is doubtful if they meet with general acceptance, they are so uncomfortable and inconvenient. The sloping shouldered effect can be produced by skillfully arranged trimming and flat wide collars with much less trouble.

The blouse bodice is still worn and will probably be worn all winter. The belt is now made of folded material like the bodice, mounted on a stiff foundation fitted to the figure just below the waist, like a petticoat yoke. Tailors canvas of medium weight is used for this foundation, or haircloth.

The visiting costume illustrated is of light gray cloth. The godet skirt opens over a tablier of dark green velvet, with revers of white cloth embroidered with steel and gray. These revers have a scalloped edge finished with gray feather trimming. The bodice is of dark green velvet opening over an embroidered plastron of white cloth and having a pelerine collar of the same cloth. The sleeves are of gray cloth with immense medieval cuffs of embroidered white cloth. The toque is of gray velvet trimmed with gray plumes and roses. JUDIC CHOLLET.

NEW MILLINERY.

Beefeater Crowns and Rich Ribbons For Winter Wear.

Many large hats are worn in Paris, the size of which is increased by full beefeater crowns of velvet, bows of wide ribbon and clusters of ostrich plumes. Chine and watteau ribbons are the chief feature of winter millinery and are used for all sorts of hats and bonnets. These ribbons are often made of shaded satin and velvet and are very rich.

Hats are worn farther forward than has been the case for some years past and it is a style not becoming to many faces.

White felts will be worn for dress hats this season trimmed with white velvet and paste ornaments. Pale pink felt is also seen. Indeed felt shapes may be found in almost any shade and are fine and silky as satin, almost. Felt hats are decorated with stitching in Paris to wear with tailor made coats and gowns.

This winter's ribbons are marvels of richness and beauty, like the dress silks. Satin grounds with raised flowers of velvet, or velvet stripes and figure, velvet with silk patterns, chine, brocade and oriental designs vie with each other in fashion and beauty.

The colors for winter millinery are mainly dark and rich, violet velvet being used very effectively in some of the new models. Maroon is also seen again, usually in a combination of shades.

The old fashioned drawn silk bonnets and hats are revived and are very taking. They are trimmed with bows of velvet, plumes and velvet flowers. Their chief [illegible] is that they catch dust in every fold of the shirring and require daily brushing with a small bonnet broom made of fine hair in order to keep their beauty.

Ostrich plumes and tips are largely worn and will be all winter. Sometimes the crown of the hat or bonnet is surrounded by a short upright trimming composed of [illegible] tips.

An illustration is given of a hat of green braided felt. An immense bow of green satin ribbon is held in place at the front of the hat by a paste buckle. Pale pink velvet flowers are arranged at the top of the crown, while at the sides and back are flowers of [illegible] brown velvet with [illegible] A black ostrich boa is worn with this hat. SHE HAD TROUBLE

And Her Husband Explained Why She Was Without a Cook.

She was evidently bent upon producing an impression not only upon the acquaintance she had just met, but upon all the other people in the car as well.

"Yes, I heard you had come back to Chicago to live," she said, after greetings had been exchanged, "but really I've not had time to come to see you. I have no cook—servants are the bane of a housekeeper's life in Chicago."

"Ah, I suppose you keep a good many?"

"Well, you know, we can't get them well trained, and it takes a person's will to keep them going."

"Oh, well, I haven't had much trouble, but then I only keep two. How many?"—

"Of course, my house is large and I am particular."

"Where are you living now? I want to come to see you."

"On the north side. I only wish I could ask you over to dinner, but it is impossible so long as I am without a cook, and as I am particular about references I may not be suited for a long time."

"How lucky that I met you today. An old cook of mine is hunting a place. She will just suit you, for she is an excellent servant, fond of children, seldom goes out, and"—

"How nice! Have you seen Ellen since you came back?"

"I was going to see her today. I am so anxious to get Christine a place, and I thought she might take her, but now that I've met you I shall not need to go. I can give her the best of recommendations, so you"—

"Yes. I haven't seen Ellen for a long time. She lives plainly, I might say poorly, and, of course, we don't go out together at all."

"Indeed. Now, about the cook, shall I send her to you, or"—

"Oh, don't trouble yourself; I"—

"It is no trouble at all! What is your number?"

"Dear me, I don't believe I have a card with me. I intended to stop at the engraver's today, but the fall things in the shops were so lovely I forgot all about it."

"Too bad. However, I can write down your address; you will find her a treasure, I assure you."

"Yes, yes; no doubt. But really, I am getting along very well, and I hate to train"—

"But you won't need to train Christine. I did that myself, and I'd take her now only I have a treasure already."

"Yes. Do tell me if you ever see the Upwells now?"

"Yes, indeed. They have just gone to boarding. Christine had been living with them for a year, and Laura was perfectly delighted with her. You had better engage her at once. Why, isn't that your husband coming in? So glad to see you, Mr. Van Tompkins. I am perfectly delighted to see Dora looking so well. Why, she hasn't changed a bit in five years."

"Indeed she hasn't. I think it is wonderful too. Six years married, and the way that woman has worked! Why, she never had a hired girl in the house except once, when the twins had scarlet fever. Why, Dora, I haven't seen you blush so at a compliment since you were a girl!"—Chicago Tribune.

Her Error.

Frederick the Great's father was in the habit of kicking the shins of those who differed from him in argument. One day he asked a courtier if he agreed with him on some discussed point. "Sire," he returned, "it is impossible to hold a different opinion from a king who has such strong convictions and wears such thick boots."

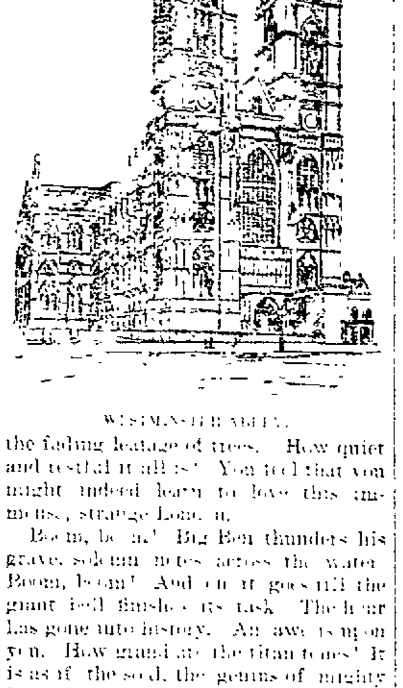
A BEAUTIFUL AND INSPIRING SIGHT AT NIGHT.

Solemn Tones of Big Ben—Waterloo Bridge—Westminster Abbey—The Great Men of England—Cleopatra's Needle—A View of the Dark Waters.

(Special Correspondence.)

LONDON, Oct. 21.—As you walk along the Thames embankment at night you see what is perhaps the most beautiful river sight in the world. Upon the dark, restful water there is a gleaming and dancing of many lights. Above you the moon shines softly, and the stars bring to your mind calm, grand thoughts. As you turn and face Big Ben, to your left is the glisten of water, to your right the fading leafage of trees. How quiet and restful it all is! You feel that you might indeed learn to love this enormous, strange London.



WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

Boom, boom! Big Ben thunders his grave, solemn notes across the water. Boom, boom! And on it goes till the giant bell finishes its task. The hour has gone into history. An awe is upon you. How grand are the titan tones! It is as if the soul, the genius of mighty London arose and cried out stupendously.

Upon the benches lovers sit closely together. They are telling each other nothing—telling each other everything. They are of the slave class—the poor working class whose blood and life have been given for countless generations to the rearing up of the magnificence and stateliness and solidness of this London, the class that builds so that others may use. And they come here to make love. Ah, how grand is love! It is as sweet to the poor worker as it is to the idler, the "aristocrat." Nay, it is sweeter. It is the magic wand that eases all pain—life's elixir. Romeo with grimy hands is none the less Romeo. Juliet is Juliet whether she picks rags or wears a crown.

Yonder is Westminster abbey. Here from the bridge you can see its dark, soft shadows. In it the great men of England sleep. Over them it stands guard, worn by the fret and charge of centuries. Surrounding are the rush and whirl and roar of the great city, but it calmly awaits with its dead while epochs come and go. Requiescat in pace!

Plash, plash, plash! It is the voice of the dark old river as it runs out to meet the sea. Oh, how steady and grand it is! You are filled with a strange calm, and you think and dream. What secrets might it tell, this old, old Thames! Of foreign invaders, of crashing, barbarous hosts, of the eagles of world conquering Romans, of pomp and magnificence of pageant, of crime, of love, of hate, of innocent pleasure! What an array there would be if the ghosts of its dead arose! Oh, I have learned to love this river even if I have not learned to love London, for its mighty, kindly bosom gives peace and rest and lasting sleep to the poor miserables whom the world pushes from off the plank of life into the unknown, the eternal sea.

I look through the darkness, and before my imagination arise the masts of strange, rich ships. On their decks I see throngs of fair haired Danes—fierce Northmen, mighty muscled and mighty thewed, fine barbarians. And I hear the clash of axes. In the air is the shock of arms. Clouds of British arrows are flying. Blood wets the decks. Men fall wounded, men fall dying, men fall dead. I see the faces—sinister faces, pain torn faces. I am terrified. The flame of the fighting instinct is kindled within myself. But I look and look, and the vision fades. Around me is the soft, clear peace of night, and the Thames is flowing, flowing to the sea.

The moon is clear and bright, and in the distance is to be seen the low lying western arch of Waterloo bridge. It is most beautiful, is this arch. I like so much to look at and admire it whenever I approach it. The line of its curve is so clear and defined. It rests and is grateful to the eye. Often I walk along the embankment here with my friend the countess. She is divinely tall and fair, is this countess, and, though from principle I dislike and avoid aristocrats collectively, still individually they are often most charming.

The night before last the countess and I stood before Cleopatra's Needle and speculated concerning it. How and when was it built? By what magic had the great stones been raised and put into place and fastened so as to defy the power of time to loose and crumble them? What were the men like who had built it? Were they driven slaves with great dumb dark eyes? And what was this queen, this Cleopatra, like? Surely a woman supple of figure, and great and luminous of eyes, and a subtle understander of men, I thought.

M'SWAT AND THE SERVANT.

The Latter Refuses to Go, and the Former Protects Lobelia.

"There's no use in talking, Billiger. That girl has got to go!"

"What's the matter, Lobelia?" inquired Mr. McSwat, looking up from his newspaper.

"She shan't stay in this house another day. She's an impudent, lazy, good for nothing"—

"Who is?"

"That kitchen girl."

"What's her name?"

"She calls herself Esmeralda."

"Not a bad name," mused Mr. McSwat. "What has she been doing?"

"She hasn't been doing anything. That's the trouble. I give her two afternoons off in the week, and she takes four. She quits her work before it's half done and goes out walking. She goes up to her room at any time of the day and takes a nap. She's just come down from a two hours' sleep and is yawning out there in the kitchen as if she owned the house and was tired of living in it. I've talked mildly to her, and it doesn't do any good. She's got to go!"

Mr. McSwat picked up his paper again.

"All right, Lobelia," he said. "Go and fire her."

"I will."

Three minutes later Mr. McSwat became dimly conscious of some unusual commotion in the back part of the house. Sounds as of voices raised in animated conversation reached his ears. He laid aside his paper and listened.

"Go it, Lobelia! Go it, Esmeralda!" he muttered under his breath, as the discussion appeared to become more lively. The voice he took to be Esmeralda's gradually assumed the principal burden of the conversation, but at intervals he could hear Lobelia's clear soprano endeavoring to secure recognition. There was a prolonged crash as if the end gate had dropped from a wagon loaded with tinware and crockery while going uphill, and Mrs. McSwat came flying back into the room with flushed face and wild gesticulation.

"She says she won't go, Billiger," she gasped, choking with wrath. "I offered her two weeks' wages and told her she could leave. She said she didn't want to, and I told her to go anyhow. The brazen thing defied me! She used dreadful language, and I threatened to have her put out. Then she kicked the table over and danced round on the pie pans and dared me to touch her. She's got to get out of here this very day or I will!"

"That's right, Lobelia," asserted Mr. McSwat cheerfully. "That's right. Put her out. It's your house. And it's your fight," he added, turning again to his newspaper.

"Are you going to sit there and let that horrible girl turn the house upside down?"

"M—hey? What?"

"Billiger McSwat, have you got the spirit of a man?"

"Ur—what did you remark?"

"I say are you going to let that dreadful girl take possession of the premises and turn me out?"

"I don't hear her taking possession of anything, Lobelia," said Mr. McSwat, listening intently a moment.

"Because, if you are, I'll call in some neighbor and tell him I can't get the man of this house to protect me and I want help."

"Great Scott! What do you want me to do?" exclaimed Billiger, with a yawn.

"Go out to the kitchen and tell that impudent thing to pack up her traps and go. Give her two weeks' pay and then give her two hours to get her trunk and all her belongings moved. Tell her you're the master of this house"—

"But I'm not, you know, Lobelia," weakly interposed Billiger.

"If you're afraid to go and give the girl her walking papers, say so, and I'll call a policeman."

"I don't think it will be necessary to do that. I'll go and talk to her."

He rose slowly and proceeded toward the kitchen, whistling with great apparent indifference as he went.

He found Esmeralda holding the fort, redhaired and defiant.

"My good girl," he said in a conciliating tone, "this kind of thing won't do, you know"—

"Don't you 'good girl' me, you whinin hypocrite!" screeched Esmeralda, waving a big tin dipper threateningly. "You shut your bag o' wind, git right out o' here, or"—

"But see here, Miss—Miss—I don't believe I know your last name"—

"Don't make no difference what my name is! I know what you're drivin at, and I ain't a goin away! I'm goin to stay right here!"

"But don't you see that's all wrong? You don't belong to the family, you know"—

"I don't want no more sass from you! It's a doggone shame to turn a good girl out at the beginnin of cold weather, when she's fixed all comf'table an make her hunt a new place, an I ain't goin to be turned out, bet your life!"

"But"—

"If you don't walk out o' here, I'll make you wish you had! A man hain't got no business in a kitchen!"

"If you think you are going to run over this family, young woman," said Mr. McSwat, heroically asserting himself, "let me tell you"—

A pint of half cooked apple sauce flew past his head and spattered horribly on the wall.

He hastily put himself on the other side of the door.

Then he walked back to the sitting room, making a somewhat labored effort to whistle unconcernedly as he walked.

"Lobelia," he said, "I think she'll quiet down soon and go of her own accord. I talked to her pretty straight."

"What did she say?"

"She objected, of course, but"—

"Did she say she'd go?"

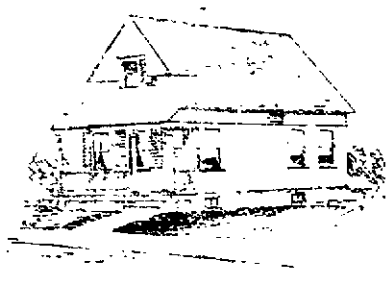
"No, she didn't exactly say that, but she tried to argue with me. She said

AN ATTRACTIVE DESIGN.

This Neat Little Cottage Can Be Erected at a Cost of but $950.

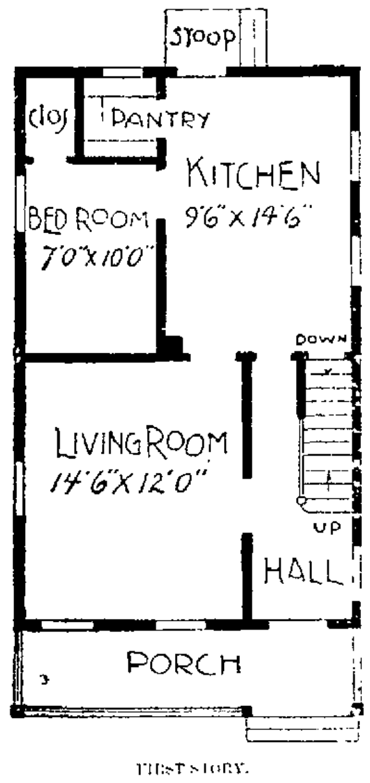
[Copyright, 1895, by George Palliser, Architect, 32 Park place, New York.]

The man who really means to own his own home is never ashamed of whatever any honest effort in that line may bring about, and if he cannot get a fine house he is contented with a small, simple one, so long as it is his and within his ability to pay for it. The man who is conceited and stuck up, so much so as to say, "I won't have any house till I can have just what I want and am able to pay for it," can invariably be figured on as he who will always be working hard for his landlord and one who is willing to pay a big rent for his imaginary wants, and thus will never be able to save enough money to own his home or fill his ambition.



PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

The design herein illustrated represents a one story and attic cottage, giving a neat and attractive home for very little money, the estimated cost in any ordinary location being about $950. There is a cellar under the whole house, and the first and second floor plans give a clear conception of its layout, and a careful study will clearly indicate the possibilities of such a home. This might be the beginning of a larger house by the placing of it a proper distance back and in the right location to use it as an extension to the future front addition. I have seen many houses so started, with a very happy termination. Buy a lot while they are cheap, build a small house, get room for your family while it is small and you are all growing up together, and by the time your family requires more room you are better able to bear the expense. The ground is more valuable, improvements more ripe, and you can then be right up with the times.



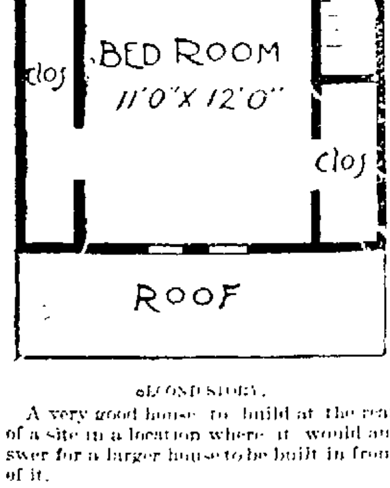
FIRST STORY.

Plan.—One story cottage, 18 feet front, 28 feet deep. Height of stories: Cellar, 6 feet 6 inches, first story 9 feet; cellar walls of stone.

Side walls of frame, covered with novelty siding, giving a clapboard finish, roof shingled.

Interior woodwork plain and finished with two coats of paint in appropriate tints.

Cistern for water supply; sink and pump in kitchen, cesspool for drainage.



SECOND STORY.

A very good house to build at the rear of a site in a location where it would answer for a larger house to be built in front of it.

Full working plans and specifications furnished for 2 per cent on cost named by applying to George Palliser, 32 Park place, New York.

Features of European Cottages.

One of the main features of European cottages is the materials they are composed of. There they let brick be brick and wood wood, and they depend largely upon the mellowness of age to give tone, and as the surroundings—trees, shrubs, etc.—grow to and around the house a harmony of the whole is the general result. With brick walls and dark woodwork, with the old style pantile roof oftentimes moss covered in patches, and especially if a vine or rose bush be, as is so often done, trained over the front porch, a picturesque and lasting expression is attained which is ever fresh and cheery. Another noticeable feature is the attention given to the sky outline of roofing and the light and shade given by the overhanging eaves and verges of gables.

"The prices of bicycles, according to the manufacturers' lists, have not diminished much," said a New Yorker who is up in the secrets of the trade, "but riders in New York are getting wheels a good deal cheaper by means of an ingenious system recently adopted by retail dealers. You know each dealer in bicycles signs an agreement not to sell a new machine below the figures marked on the price list. Well, so far as I am [illegible] this agreement is rigidly adhered to in its letter, but knocked galley west when it comes to its meaning. The scheme is simply this: When a person enters a bicycle dealer's establishment in search of a wheel, he is shown the collection. He asks the prices, and is told that this make is $100, that one $110, the other $120 and so on. If he demurs at the price, as he is pretty apt to, the dealer tells him that if he will come again next day there may be a good secondhand wheel in at a lower price.

"The visitor leaves, and then the dealer puts the bicycle that most suited his fancy on the rent list and hires it out to the first one who calls for a machine by the hour. When the inquirer calls again, he is shown the same wheel that he wanted the day before, but the price is only $65. The two or three hours' use as a hired wheel has made it a secondhand article. This trick is being universally played in New York, and I reckon dealers in Washington and elsewhere will get on to it in course of time."—Washington Star.

All those who attended the first Marion May festival at the Presbyterian church some years ago will remember how well the vocalist, Mrs. Miles, of Columbus, pleased the audience at that time. Mrs. Miles has the intention of organizing a vocal class in Marion and a large number of Marion's vocalists have promised already to take advantage of this rare opportunity for good and careful instruction. Mrs. Miles teaches the pure italian method and is very well recommended from the conservatory of Boston and Signor Corsy, of New York, one of the best vocal instructors in America. For further particulars call and see Mrs. I. F. McNeal.

THE CITY IN BRIEF.

The Bushnell club will hold a meeting tomorrow night, November 2, at the club rooms.

The Bushnell Trophy cup, won by Claude Doty at Springfield, is on exhibition in Turney's west window.

Edward Malloy fell, while in his place of business Thursday night, and fractured a couple of the ribs on his right side.

Allen Smalley will address the democracy of Green Camp this evening. Quite a number of local Democrats will attend the meeting.

J. E. Butler, grand lecturer of Kentucky, of the A. O. U. W., gave an address at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Thursday. His subject was "Home."

The Delaware and Marion foot ball game will be played at the fair grounds Saturday afternoon. The boys have received their uniforms and are ready for the contest.

Rev. Shutte, of Bellevue, Ohio, delivered the Reformation sermon at the Lutheran church Thursday night. A large congregation was present and he gave an interesting address.

Calvin S. Brice and James E. Campbell passed through Marion today over the C. H. V. and T. Hon Boston G. Young and Thomas Watkins were the only ones at the depot to meet them.

Residents of the hill employed watchmen Thursday night to protect their property. They did not care to have the same pranks played on them as Wednesday night, and that quarter of the city was reasonably quiet.

The first annual ball of LeGrande Council, No. 320, Jr. O. U. A. M., was given at the People's rink Thursday evening and was well attended. The People's orchestra furnished the music and it was not until a late hour that the dancers left the floor.

The Schilling Quartette, consisting of vocalists from Pittsburg and Galion and a violinist from Cleveland, will give an entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on the evening of Nov 12, under the auspices of the Relief corps, the funds to be devoted to the worthy poor of the city.

Sarah E. Short was granted a divorce by Judge Smalley in the court of common pleas this afternoon from her husband, Patrick F. Short, on the grounds of habitual drunkenness, extreme cruelty, gross neglect of duty, and was restored to her former name, Sarah E. Warrell.

Watchmen are to be placed at the crossing of every street and alley when the Big Four special passes through here Monday. The curves along the road have nearly all been straightened, and everything will be in tiptop shape for the big run. It is not known what time the train will arrive at Marion, but no stop is to be made here.

The pranks of Halloween were not so bad Thursday night as they were the night before, though several doors were struck with rocks, a few rods of fences were torn down, gates suspended from telegraph poles, outhouses turned over and other "innocent amusements" that would probably send the youngsters to the reform farm if they could be caught.

Col. Charles Negley received a letter this morning from his old friend, Rev. Heoffer, of Greenville. Rev. Heoffer and Mr. Negley were friends at Union City, and the Col. is of the opinion that there is no minister quite as near right in preaching a funeral as Rev. Heoffer. In his letter Rev. Heoffer says he has been imposed upon, and that poison was administered to him.

THEY WON'T WORK.

Tramps Are Never Able To Find the Columbia Street Contractors.

W. J. Irwin, who is at work here constructing the Columbia street ditch, is desirous of hiring one hundred men and needs them badly to get his contract finished. The tramps that come nightly to the prison are asked if they want work and are sent to the headquarters of Mr. Irwin, but not one of the thirty or forty sent to him have put in their appearance.

In speaking of the matter this morning, Mr. Irwin stated to the STAR that at all times he had difficulty in securing good, sober laborers. One hundred laborers can secure work of him at any time. The Columbia ditch or sewer is moving along nicely and all it needs is more help.

The Month of OCTOBER

In spite of the warm, unfavorable weather, was the best October for sales in the history of our business. Constant hustling, attention to the wants of customers, great assortments and the prices that please you are the factors that combine to make our business gain steadily month by month and year by year. We want November to add its share to the business advance. More customers are what we want. The sales in our Dress Goods stock have been immense--they must be increased in November. This is our way of doing it, viz:

These prices will be for one week, commencing Saturday, November 2d.

20 Pieces all colors half-wool Henrietta that sells at 25c, our price during the week will be 15c.
15 Pieces double fold Wool Plaids, suitable for waists and children's dresses, we have too many of them and propose to "hurry out" the 25c ones at 12½c.
20 Pieces all-wool Henriettas or Serges in a quality that most other stores sell at 35c, our price in limited quantities to customer is 25c.
10 Pieces all-wool 40-inch Novelty Dress Goods that is good value at 40c will be closed out at 25c.
10 Pieces all colors 40-inch wide Ladies' Dress Flannels, a splendid quality 25c in the 49c quality.
6 Pieces of the popular Boucle Dress Goods, the real value of which is 75c, our price during this sale week will be 50c.
200 Yards high class Novelty Suitings 54 inches wide, bought to sell at $1.00 yard, our price while they last will be 60c.
300 Yards fine Brocaded French Dress Fabrics, our own importation, 50 inches wide, as good quality as sold anywhere at $1.25, our price is 95c.
50 Elegant Pattern Suits worth $5.00, $6.00 and $7.00 will be placed in one pile at $3.75.
5 Pieces black Mohair Brocades that we sold at 60c, 75c and 85c, will be put to one price, 50c.
$5.50--A black silk finish all-wool Henrietta Dress Pattern at $5.50 with all linings free will be a great drive in the black goods department as the material itself is worth $1.00 per yard, seven yards in pattern.

Every express train brings Wraps. We have always been favored with a very large trade in wraps but this season fairly eclipses our fondest hopes. We are in it, while others who make great claims are just holding on by the edges. Our wrap stock again takes the lead that it has held for four years. Our garments are superior in fit, fashion and finish. We show the popular rough effects in Jackets from $5.00 up, and Jackets lined throughout with silk at $10.00.

Don't miss our Special Dress Goods Sale for the first week of November.
